COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

Do Not Generally Prefer Licensed Hotels. Are Abstemious.

Breezy Letter from Editor of The "Sample Case" as to Attitude of Traveling Men on Important Question.

"From time to time there have appeared reports of proceedings of State Hotel Keepers' associations from which it was made to appear that in states where saloons have been driven out by local or state-wide prohibition, the hotel keepers have been urged by commercial travelers to restore bars to their hotels."

"Wish to say in behalf of commercial travelers generally that there is no instance on record where commercial travelers have made any such request. So far as traveling men are concerned, an increasing number of them prefer to stop at hotels where there are no bars."

In line with this sentiment I quote you from a resolution adopted by organized commercial travelers recently in Indiana. The resolution, in part, follows:—

"The traveling salesman of Indiana are sober, industrious business men, who have at heart the general welfare and good of any community they visit, and they do not wish to be in the light of furnishing a demand for the return of the 'grog shop' within or without the hotel of any state. We do not desire or demand the return of barrooms to hotels from which they have been excluded by law, and we prefer to patronize hotels where liquors are not sold."
